

Clarisse Dromain, MD, PhD

Head of Oncologic Imaging Department
Gustav Roussy
Cancer Campus Grand Paris
Villejuif Cedex, France

Pr. Clarisse Dromain is the Head of the Oncologic Imaging Department of the Gustave Roussy Cancer Campus University Hospital in Paris, France. Her major research interests are interventional and diagnostic breast imaging in particular recent development in digital breast mammography.

Dr. Dromain received her medical degree from the Pierre et Marie Curie University of Paris in 1992, an MSc in DEA signal treatment and application to imaging in 1996 from the same University and a PhD in physics in 2014 from Paris Sud University.

She is member of several international and national societies, including the ESR (European Society of Radiology), EUSOBI (European Society of Breast Imaging) ESGAR (European Society of Gastro and Abdominal Radiology) and the SFR (French Radiological Society). She is also member of the ECR Congress Breast Sub-Committee.

Pr. Dromain has published numerous peer-reviewed papers (115 hits on Pub Med) and is a reviewer for many international and national journals including Radiology, European Radiology, European Journal of Radiology and JCO.