

JASON HALPERIN, MD

Dr. Jason Halperin received a Master of Public Health degree from Columbia University in New York in 2006, and went on to earn his medical degree from the University of the Vermont College of Medicine in Burlington, Vermont, in 2010. He received his residency training at the Tulane University Department of Internal Medicine in New Orleans, and has served on the Tulane University Medical Center Ethics Committee. Following residency, Dr. Halperin completed an infectious diseases fellowship at New York University School of Medicine. He returned to New Orleans in 2015 to join CrescentCare. His areas of interest include HIV, Hepatitis C and HIV prevention services such as PrEP. He is also an Assistant Professor of Medicine at Tulane University's School of Medicine.