

Faculty Bio

Andrew C. Charles, MD

Professor of Neurology

Meyer and Renee Luskin Chair in Migraine and Headache Studies

Director, Goldberg Migraine Program

David Geffen School of Medicine, University of California, Los Angeles

Los Angeles, CA

Andrew Charles is a Professor of Neurology at the UCLA School of Medicine, where he holds the Meyer and Renee Luskin Chair in Migraine and Headache Studies. He is Director of the UCLA Goldberg Migraine Program, which includes basic and clinical research, education, and care of patients with headache disorders. His laboratory focuses on cellular and pharmacological mechanisms of migraine and pain, with a particular interest in the development of novel therapies. He is an associate editor of the journal Cephalalgia, and he has served on the Board of Trustees of the International Headache Society. He currently holds the position of Treasurer of the American Headache Society.