Leonard B. Saltz, MD is a gastrointestinal medical oncologist and professor of medicine at Weill Cornell Medical College. Dr. Saltz is also an attending physician at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center (MSKCC), where he serves as executive director for clinical value and sustainability. He has led numerous clinical and translational trials at MSKCC and served as principal investigator on several multicenter national and international clinical trials. He has authored or co-authored more than 300 peer-reviewed articles, as well as numerous reviews, books, book chapters, and editorials. He has also written and spoken extensively about rising costs and the declining relative value of many of the newer anticancer therapies, and the role these high-cost drugs play in exacerbating disparities in cancer care.
